I believe Republicans are more hypocritical. Reason? They will say things that are valid for that time frame but not follow through the next time user1 I feel like Republicans are more hypocritical because they like to have small government but then complain when a homeless person slows down their wait time at the user2 That's very true, you can't have a small government and expect healthcare to go smoothly user1 What are some examples of follow through not happening? I wasn't made aware of that. user2 A prime example is when Obama wanted to nominated Merrick Garland user1 The republicans blocked his nomination as it was an election year user1 Yet when Trump was in office they nominated a new justice after Ruth Ginsberg passed away user1 They really like to block things, I've noticed. user2 Do we block them this much too? user2 That's how change is held back, because they block many things from going through. user1

ER.

I still don't understand why they messed with Obamacare. user2

It would have made healthcare run better, but they sort of crippled it I've heard. Not sure about details.

user2

find it

user2

tight hold -

user2

user2

again? user2

user2

user2

user2

user2

user2

user2

Everyone talks about common ground on issues, but it's hard to

They have done quite a few things

We have blocked some things from

But not as much in my opinion

them as well

to weaken it.

user1

user1

user1

user1

user1

Republicans seem so unwilling to make any sort of compromise -McConnel has such a tight old on the party, they all fall in steop user2

One person controlling others Health insurance is a universal right - yet Republicans can't seem to understand that

Is there a way to change this giving up too much headway

There has to be a way to pattern of non-compromise without compromise - yet some issues are so clear - pro-gun control - anti-gun control - where's the full middle ground on that one they increased premiums, higher deductibles, less coverage

Ultimately it is up to the people to change how things are run Or vote them OUT -

I have a friend who believes that the gerry mandering problem is primarily Republicans. Is it true?

We need more Democrats in Congress - I fear we will lose the majority in the house come Nov

2022 - then Nothing will get done

I don't think there is except having others step down or retire

user1

user1

Exactly

user1

I think so switching districts all around - it's basically cheating my district congressman was often a Republican - but he was finally voted out two years ago - guess

Republican candidate

money - that's why

what - they have re-districted our area and the advantage will be to a be Democratic - but my old district could swing back Republican user2 And why can't we pass common sense gun laws in this country??? Republicans get so much NRA

i think my new congressman will