user1: Hi, I think both parties are rather hypocritical, but the Republicans are more so.

user2: Republicans are more hypocritical because they vote against their own interests. Like tax policies that benefit the rich, despite the vast majority of Republicans not being rich.

user1: Yes, I can't understand how the party of less government is so focused on controlling so many things, such as women's rights to healthcare access, voting rights, and when they're supposedly pro-life, instituting policies that harm people.

user2: And then there's the, sadly, more topical notion of Republicans wanting to ban abortions while also opposing gun control, showing they do not actually care about the well-being of children.

user1: I can't wrap my mind around wanting children to be born so badly yet steadfastly refusing to support them once they're here, and beyond that, the lack of gun control has resulted in so much harm against children.

user1: It makes me sick that lawmakers won't do anything about the gun issue. NO ONE needs an assault rifle. How hard is that to understand?

user2: It's a party obsessed with religion and tradition. Its members believe progress is evil.

user2: Personal "freedom" trumps all other values, pun intended.

user1: That's how I feel too. So much selfishness, greed, and willful harm towards those who don't fall in line with their agenda.