user1: It may be due to the media sources I frequent, but I believe Republicans to be more hypocritical due to what they say they stand for and how they actually act.

user2: I think both Democrats and Republicans are hypocritical to a certain degree but Republicans more so.

user1: For example with Pro-Life, they want to regulate or ban abortions as they say to protect life, but then seem to not do anything tangible to help save the lives of the already living whether it be children, poor, etc.

user1: I do agree that all politicians (both sides) are hypocritical as they both say what they need to in order to get votes, but seem to rarely actually do what they say they would (or sometimes to opposite).

user2: I agree. There a lots of things that should be done to protect the lives of those already living.

user1: Republicans also use "Freedom" as a way to rile up their constituents to think that they should be able to do anything they want to, but that is not how "freedom" was designed by our country's founders and it is doing more harm than good.

user1: To me this is highly hypocritical.

user2: Sometimes I feel most Republicans are quite driven by hate and conspiracy theories. It does make them hypocritical.

user1: Taxes is another issue I feel like they are hypocritical about (at the the higher up politicians), because they want to make sure everyone gives their fair share, but also bend to fat cat lobbyists to make sure conglomerates and the super rich can still skate by with minimal tax responsibility.

user1: Fully agree with that. Many of my Republican acquaintances who I thought were educated people believe in Qanon and anti-vaxx conspiracy theories and it baffles my mind.

user2: I feel that lobbyists have too much influence over politicians. In reality most politicians are working for big business and not the American people.

user1: It is also very hypocritical to claim to be bringing a nation together but also spout so much hate to keep the nation divided.

user2: There has been quite a bit of hate for the past few years and it's really dangerous for the country as a whole.

user1: I agree with that as well. They sit at the top and keep Americans angry and divided, while they are sort of operating without the best interests of the majority of Americans at heart.

user2: If more people realized this things would be better.

user1: This is why I'm afraid of Twitter becoming a sort of cesspool of "freedom of speech"... I'm afraid there are going to be violent consequences.

user2: We need leaders who actually care about the people and aren't using their office for personal gain.

user1: Yes!
